

So what is a stamp anyway?

A long time ago, the person receiving a letter would be charged money, and they had to pay before they would be given the letter. Often people would not accept the mail because they didn't want to pay for it, and mail deliverers would have many wasted trips without making any money. So it was decided that the sender would pay, and stamps were invented as a receipt to show that money had been paid to deliver the letter.
